Senator Cantor's Bill for Its Preservation Reaches the Assembly.

It is Referred to the Favorably inclined Cities Committee.

Little Doubt of Its Final Passage in the Lower House.

PRECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.1
ALBANY, N. Y., April 11.—Senator Cantor's bill allowing the Polo Grounds to be used for baseball games this Summer by postponing the opening of One Hundred and Eleventh street, from Fifth to Sixth avenue, was received fron he Senate this morning.

Hardly had the title been read when Assem blyman Hagan, from the Sixteenth District, moved that it be ordered to a third reading and made a special order for some day next week. There was a chorus of objections from some of the New York members, who are warm friends of the Board of Aldermen.

Eddy Hagan, who has great influence with them, went among the objectors and spoke to them carnestly for a few minutes, when the objections to its third reading were withdrawn, but it could not be made a special order.

It was referred to the Cities Committee, who are inclined to report it favorably.

One or two Assemblymen objected to the third reading, because they had received letters from the property owners in the neighborhood declaring that they were taxed without getting any benefit for their money, and that the improvement was very much needed.

There is little doubt of the bill's ultimate passage.

bers to an Evening World reporter this morning, the wholesalers have been selling goods at prices so low that there was no profit in doing business.

This state of trade is said to have beging about the middle of February, and is alleged to be the result of the operations of the gigantic Whiskey Manufacturers' Trust.

This Trust tries to crush out the manufacturers who won't go into their organization, and the latter, to protect themselves, sell their goods direct to the retail dealer.

The new Trust intends to co-operate with the distillers Trust, by putting their prices down to a figure below what the anti-Trust manufacturers are now selling their goods.

They will be unable to stand this strain and will be driven to the wall, and then the wolesale dealers' Trust steps in and raises prices to what they term "a living profit."

The Association has had two meetings at the Milman House this week, at which several names for the organization have been proposed, but none were settled upon.

All the large wholesale houses in New York. Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore were represented at the meeting. The Western Trust holds its annual meeting at Peoria, II., next week and some sort of an agreement will be made between the two Trusts.

EXPLOSIONS AND FIRE IN THE HOWARD BUILDING DOWNTOWN.

Kennedy's "Rose Market" and Squire's Sporting Goods Place Burned Out and Wrecked-Some Mystery About It-A Pew Minutes Before It Broke Out the Watchman West His Rounds.

It was lower Broadway's turn to have an exciting fire this morning. During the past few days the firemen have been kept busy fighting flames, and two alarms sounded at 7.12 A. M. to-day brought them to the Howard building. 176 and 178 Broadway, where a smouldering fire had been discovered a few minutes before. The firemen made their way into the basement of 176, the front portion of which is occupied as a "Rose Market." Flames were then licking up through the cracks in the floor, and the whole place was filled with blinding smoke.

There being a heavy brick wall senarating the blazing apartment from the next room, it was shought that the fire could be confined to the rooms in which it started, but the firemen suddenly discovered that it had extended around in the rear of the place and had got a good start in the basement of 178, occupied by Skidmore & Co., dealers in shoes.

And also in the store above, kept by Henry C. Squire, the sporting-goods dealer.

Suddenly there was a loud report, quickly followed by a shower of glass, and a cloud of smoke puffed ont of the front window of Squire's establishment.

Other explosions came at intervals of a few moments. All the store windows were blown ont, and the crowd took fright and ran.

It was thought the explosions came from gunpowder, but the Fire Marshal thinks they were the result of het air. The stove was closed up tight, and the air had no way of escaping.

Capt. McLaughlin was on hand with his reserves, and with difficulty they maintained the fire lines.

It took an hour's hard work to conquer the fire lines.

It took an hour's hard work to conquer the fire. Squire's establishment was a total wreck, and guns, boxing gloves and fancy sporting goods of all kinds were thrown pell-mell into a heap. Harris's gents' furnishing goods store, at 176, was saved from any great damage.

How the fire started is a mystery. Night-Watchman Gray had just given the building in charge of Janitor Nelson. He had made a tour of the place a few minutes before and discovered nothing wrong.

KRULISCH WANTS TO WORK

HE WILL LET NO DIME MUSEUM EXHIBIT HIM, HE SAYS.

An Evening World reporter called at the home of Jacob Walters, 871 Third avenue, today, to investigate the story that his wife saw Willie Kralisch in the bakery of Mrs. Loster on the morning of the murder of Guenther Weeh-

It will be recalled that in accounting for the ten or twelve minutes during which time the drug clerk was backed to death, in the; rear of Otto Doepfner's drug store, in Third avenue, above Fifty-sixth street, Willie Krulisch said that he went for rolls at about five or eight minutes after 7 o'clock.

He said he went to Mrs. Loster's, near Fiftysecond street. He got back after the body of Wechsung was found, at about 7.25. He said he got no rolls, because they were all gone at the bakery.

Mrs. Loster and her female clerk testified that Willie was not there that morning, and that all

"Had the boy an overcoat on? I asked my wife, as I read further down.

"No, said she, 'he had on a sort of gray jumper, faded and almost threadbare. He was wide across the shoulders and short."

This exactly tallies with Willie Krulisch's appearance on the fatal morning, and Mrs. Walters is positive that it was not more than a minute later than 7, 10.

She did not offer her testimony at the trial because she did not suppose it would be needed, inasmuch as Mrs. Loster and two young women employees were in the bakery at the time.

A Grocer's Mistake Will Make All Yankeedom Smile a Smile.

Why New England Conservatory Girls Have Stopped Scale-Singing for a Day.

IMPRCIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD, 1 Boston, April 11. -There's a unique sensation in this town which, if not suppressed, will nake all New England smile a smile. There was something the matter with the alad at the New England Conservatory of Music last night. To-day, with the several thousand young lady students at that institution, the usual scale-running and solfeggios have become a matter of less than secondary consideration.

For the nonce, indeed, the girls are thor-oughly at odds with life and off tone with masic.

It is all through a mistake of the Conserva-tory grocers. It is all through a mistake of the Conservaory's grocers.
Big grocers they are —Cobb, Bates & Yerra—heir mistake was correspondingly big.

They had an order for a large lot of salad oil for the Conservatory tables.
In place of it they sent machine oil!
That's what alled the salad.
And that's what sile the girls.
No fatalities are looked for.

LITTLE LOUIS DUOY REMAINED AWAY PROM HOME TWO DAYS.

He Slept in His Own Hallway at Night but Wouldn't Come Into the House-His Travels Extended Only as Far as Central Park-No Reason for Running

MY BOY, LOUIS DUOY, is missing from home, 304 years old, has brown, sore eyes, light hair, wore black coat, gray striped weellen pants, blue silk necktic brown stockings, much worn button shoes and black cloth hat. Information will be thankfully received by his distressed mother.

An EVENING WORLD reporter called at the above address this morning to see how Louis got mislaid. The Duoys live in a large tenement-house on the fifth floor. The lower floors are so dark that one positively has to grope his way, and the doubt might well arise as to whether Louis had not been lost in the house.

When the reporter knocked at No. 20, on the top floor, a quiet, neatly dressed woman opened it. By her side was a boy. I came to see how you came to lose your little boy," said the reporter.

"There he is," answered Mrs. Duoy, pointing to the child, who hung his head shamefacedly, as if he were abashed at having been found. Where did you get him ?" inquired the re-

"I found him lying asleep on the first floor this morning. He ran off Tuesday afternoon, this morning. He ran off Tuesday afternoon, and for these past three nights he has slept in the passage way on the first floor, right on the ground. He went off with another boy to Central Park. Poor child: he doesn't get much chance to play around here. I cannot bear to have him associate with the boys in the street when I see how they act.

We used to live uptown pear the Park, and so he was easily drawn off by this other boy to go up there and play. He had a quarter when he left, but it was all gone when he came back."

'What did you run away for and give your mother such worry?" the reporter asked of the archin.

he loft, but it was all goue when he came back."

"What did you run away for and give your mother such worry?" the reporter asked of the surchin.

He only hung his head, however, and sneaked into the other room.

His small three-yoar-old brother looked at him with wondering eyes, as if trying to conjecture where Louis could have gone on his travels.

"My husband works at a jeweller's in Maiden Lane, continued Mrs. Duoy, and he is too busy to look after these things. I thought an 'ad' in The World would bring me some news of him, but he has turned up by himself. He did not sleep very comfortably on the hard floor, and he would have come back before, only he was affaid to. He ran away once before for a short time. I am glad he is back.

Louis, the runway, beyond looking slightly depressed, as if he wished he were in the Park instead of the fifth floor front, did not seem very penitent. The lowest floor is so dark that one would have no difficulty in escaping notice, Mrs. Duoy going down there early this morning almost stumbled over her lost innocent. She was glad to get him back.

CLERK HARRIOT HITS BACK.

LESSON TO A DISTRICT-ATTORNEY ON THE LAW OF STOLEN PROPERTY.

Property Clerk Harriot is in an indignant rame of mind to-day and feels that Assistant District-Attorney Goff has made an improper use of his office to wreak political vengeance, Goff being a County Democrat, and Mr. Harriot a Tammany Hall adherent.

Goff is reported to have told Judge Cowing Goff is reported to have told Judge Cowing that Harriot refused to surronder property needed in evidence, and the Judge issued an order, with the remark that he would lock up Mr. Harriot unless he obeyed it.

The facts in the case, as shown in Mr. Harriot's records, are that on March 2 Patrolman Coughlein, of the Church Street Squad, delivered a revolver taken from Antonio Fazio to be held as evidence. On the morning of April 10 the policeman called on Mr. Harriot without a subposse or order and wanted the revolver.

Mr. Harriot refused to surrender it and gave to the policeman a copy of section 293, Laws of New York, 1882, as follows:

If any preperty or money placed in the custody of property clears shall be desired as evidence in police or criminal court, such property shall be dered to any officer who shall present an order to effect from such court. Such property, however, not be retained in said court, but shall be returned such property clerk to be disposed of according to previous provisions of this chapter.

Policeman Conghlein reported the facts to Assistant District-Attorney Goff, and he issued a subpona with the words stencilled across its face, "Bring property if any in the case." Before the policeman presented his subpona or made a report Mr. Gott went before Judge or made a report Mr. Gott went before Judge Cowing and entered a complaint against Mr. Harriot, and had him reprimanded. Meanwhile, the policeman presented his subpona, received the property, and had it in the District-Attorney's office ready for use.

This morning Mr. Harriot sent for Policeman Coughlein and will have him make a full statement in writing of the facts of the case, which will be presented to Judge Cowing.

He did not trust the banks, and kept his savings stored in a pocket of his trousers made especially for that purpose.

He intended to sail for his destination last week, but was persuaded by his employer, Frank Snyder, of No. 234 East Third street, to wait for balmier weather.

Footzowski had a presentiment that he would lose his savings (2308) if he kept it upon his person and so he buried it three feet underground in the cellar of his employer's residence.

This was on April 3, and two days later, when he went to look if his money was safe, it was gone. When he recovered from his surprise he caused the arrest of his employer's wife on suspicion of having stolen it.

She was arraigned for examination at the Essex Market Folice Court this morning, and Lawyer John C. Fraser, who appeared in her behalf, subjected Footsowski to a cross-examination.

He said that Mrs. Soyder had seen him bury the money and was the only one who knew it was there. The examination was adjourned.

Will Pistols and Coffee for Two Be on the Programme?

The Excursion Tickets Extended Out to Twelve Days.

Instead of gradually subsiding into a state of "innocuous desuctude," as the public would like to see it, the animosities of Col. Ward Mc-Allister and Major Stuyvesant Fish, and the roubles of the Four Hundred generally, in conection with the Centennial Ball, have again been brought into painful prominence, and the chief personages in the late squabble have apparently started in to fight the whole battle over

Mr. McAllister is the first to enter the fray anew, and he gives as his reason for undertak ing a dressing down of the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, that the latter has had his say all the time up to the present, and that the statements which have appeared in print regarding the frictions between himself and Mr. Fish have represented the side of the latter entirely.

M'ALLISTER'S SIDE OF IT. He now proposes to let the public look at the nomentous questions involved from his own point of view, and he begins by stating that he knows of no reason why an assault should at this late date be planned against him, as he has been relieved of all his control in the matter of the ball, even in carrying out his own plan which the Committee have adopted, and that he stands in the way of no one's schemes to make the ball a ladder for social and political ambition, refer-ring to Mr. Fish. CHARGES TAKEN UP ONE BY ONE.

CHARGES TAKEN UP ONE BY ONE.

Having thus relieved himself and stated his position clearly. Mr. Allister goes on to explain how from the first both the Committee on Plan and Scope and the Entertainment Committee gave him almost absolute authority to go on and carry out his plan for making the ball and ban-carry out his plan for making the ball and ban-quet asuccess.

He takes up one by one the charges of mis-management and incompetency that have been lately made against him and refutes them all to his own satisfaction, and doubtiess to that of the majority of the 400, who have been, figura-tively speaking, put in rather a deep hole by the public discomiture and discharge from office of their famous leader. THAT COTILLON IDEA HIS.

With regard to the opening Centennial quadrille, which, it is whispered, caused the first breach of friendly relations between the mangers and the Chairman, Mr. McAllister modestly says it was his own idea to have the cotilion danced by descendants of those who stood around Washington at the first Inauguration Ball in 1789, and in selecting the names of indies he had acted on the principle of taking direct descendants of the Revolutionary patriots. He had not followed the anti-American theory of primogeniture, which he hints that some of the members of the Committee Favored.

HE GOT NO MOREY FROM THE SALE OF BOXES.

HE GOT NO MONEY FROM THE SALE OF BOXES. HE GOT NO MONEY FROM THE SALE OF BOXES.

He also denies that he received any money from the sale of boxes, or from the Centennial fund, or that he made any contracts whatever for the ball or banquet, but that he had simply submitted estimates of probable cost of work done, and had only approved of one contract, that with the Hoffman House, which the Chairman himself had executed.

PROGES OF CONFIDENCE.

As showing the confidence which the Commit-ee placed in him, especially that of the Chair-ian, Mr. McAllister furnishes the following roof in a letter dated Nov. 7, 1888; proof in a letter dated Nov. 7, 1888;

Mt Dean Mr. McAllisters. In thanking you for all the trouble you have taken "and the skill you have extinct the skill you have extinct the skill you have still the skill you have the skill you have a skill to be seen to be sufficient to the skill you have the skill you have the skill you have the skill the skill you have the skill the skill you have the skill the s

By all means let the Governor and the Mayer have the n selling boxes as fast as you can to good people.

This, Mr. McAllister claims, shows that he did not exceed his authority in the matter of selling boxes, which was one of the most serious charges brought against him by Mr. Fish. GOOD PROPER " NOT DEFINED.

Mr. McAllister does not explain what is meant by the term "good people," but the general supposition is that it includes no one outside the pale of the Four Hundred. ASKED TO CALL IN HIS LIST OF LADIES. Soon after Mr. McAllister submitted his list of ladies for the opening quadrille to the Commit-tee on Plan and Scope he received a very short note from Mr. Fish ordering him to call it in or there would be trouble.

HOSTILITIES BEGIN. As he could not do this hostilities became more bitter, and he was inally forced to resign his secretaryship on the Entertainment Committee.
The general feeling of the management of the celebration towards him at that time he shows by the following communication sent to him by Secretary Clarence W. Bowen:

Secretary Clarence W. Bowen:

Let me acknowledge the receipt of your letter of peeterday and say that Mr. Gerry is extremely sorry that you have written as you have, and he trusts that you will reconsider your resignation as Secretary of the sub-Committee on Entertainment. A great many questions will come up before April 30, 1889, where the Committee on Entertainment will want your advice, and I saw sure that your duties will be more of an executive character than anything else. As much work as possible will be subdivided among the members of your Committee.

And thus from the same yourse.

And this from the same source: And this from the same source or time as manager of the ball and banques. In fact, the success of these two entertainments, as I have told every me and as a sure others have said, depends upon you. You have have already Mone norse work and have given more thought to these entertainments than any other member of the Committee and know what is required and what should be done; and I, for one, appreciate all that you are doing and have done, and I hope you will allow everything to go on as it is now going on.

In spite of all this Mr. McAllister says he is still willing to act as master of coremonies of the ball, but projects that it is a shameful thing that he should be subjected to such impositions when he was doing the best he could for the comfort and dejectation of the Four Hundred. WILL IT BE COFFEE AND PERFOLM? Some people think there is a smell of gore in the closing sentence of Mr. McAllister's mono-graph, which reads: Any personal differences that I may have with any member of the Entertainment Committee will keep until the celebration is ever.

RATHONIS ACCEDE TO THE EXCURSION TICKET EXTENSION.

Although the railroad companies have conceded an extension until May 6 on their excursion tickets in response to the manimous sentiment of New York merchants there is still a good deal of dissatisfaction.

It was expected that the time would be extended until May 10 and the petition circulated named that date as the limit. As it is now the tickets run from April 26 till May 6, and preparations are being made all over town for an inroad of shoppers.

IT HAT REST WITH MAYOR GRANT.

The Albany Senators having passed the bill allowing wines to be dispensed at public entertainments between 1 and 5 o'clock a. M., on the order of the Mayor, it is believed that the Assembly will not hesitate to follow suit, as it has even a larger interest at attake than the Senate. Ticket holders who had made arrangements to leave the ball at 1 o'clock are now revising their plans and preparing to make a night of it. The only liquid refreshment which appears on the preliminary printed menu of the ball supper is: Onsomme carrile en tasse for 6,000 people.

On the morning of the ball, however, the following will be added by order of the Committee: Champagne (grand see,) frappé à la Meallister en

ACQUITTED OF MURDER

BOOTBLACK AGUGLIO DECLARED NOT GUILTY OF KILLING HIS PARTNER.

The jury in the Court of Oyer and Terminer which has been trying Giovanni Aguglio for the murder of Antonio Di Napoli, his partner in the pootblacking business, came in this morning, after being locked up for twenty hours.

The foreman said they had agreed on a verdict, and quite a sensation was caused when it was declared to be "Not guilty."

Di Napoli was found one night in February lying on the sidewalk in Elizabeth atreet with his throat cut. A colored man named Johnson swore that he saw Agryllo walking with Di Napoli when the former struck his companion in the neck with something that looked like a ragor. The foreman said they had agreed on a ver-

The reporter for Tree Evening Worken left the humble mother crying softly to herself, while Lena and the baby tried to comfort her.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. I
EASTON, Pa., April 11.—Weary Sophomores of Lafayette College, returning at early morn from several hours of banqueting, found their path to the college buildings blocked by a huge stone, weighing a ton. They got over it, after a fashion, only to discover that the same Freshman hands which had rolled it into place had prepared a further surprise. Every Sophomore bedroom had been invaded and empited. The bedsteads were arranged as nines on the baseful field, one posing in each player's position. e being at the bat, and a big one being at the bat, and a big one lighting as the unipire. The wash-stands, bureaus, &c., were arranged as spectators. The sheets were tied in ghostly fashion to trees along the way. It took the Sophs until daylight to clear the field and get to bed. This settles the inter-class con-test, and the Freshies can now carry canes.

Thomas, a saloon-keeper at 1036 First avenue; Charles Harpenstein, his bartender, and John A. Sutter, of Flatbush, I. Greves, a cigar salesman, fifty-four years old, who lived at No. 867 First avenue and who died from a fractured skull received Feb. 7 in Thomas's saleon. In an ante-mortem statement Greves said that Thomas assaulted him during a quarrel over some change. This was denied by Thomas. Sutter testified that he was collecting money for his employer, when Greves entered and attempted to strike him. The witness knocked down Greves with a chair. In falling the latter's head struck an iron foot-railing about the bar fracturing his skull. Much other contradictory testimony was given, and it took the jury an hour and a half to arrive at a verdict which charged Sutter with Greves's death and held Thomas and Harpenstein as accessories. 1036 First avenue: Charles Harpenstein, his
